Many children and adults are not in the habit of reading. They don't get on with books: they are reluctant readers. As a result, they have little opportunity to develop their literacy skills - and they lose out as a result.

Others may be keen to read, but (for whatever reason) they find reading difficult. Conventional books for a person of their age might be just too difficult to read. These struggling readers need reading materials that are age-appropriate, but which don't patronise.

Of course, many readers who struggle are also reluctant.

If you're working with reluctant or struggling readers, either as a parent or teaching professional, the Encouraging Reluctant Readers FAQ offers essential guidance and contains many useful tips. It is a great place to start.

1 in 6 adults of working age in the UK find reading difficult and may never pick up a book. People's reasons for not reading are varied but are often based in fear. Some people say they find books scary and intimidating, thinking they are 'not for them' or that books are difficult or boring.

Quick Reads sets out to challenge these beliefs and to show that books and reading can be for everyone. Each year we commission big name authors to write short books that are specifically designed to be easy to read. They are the same as mainstream books in every respect but are simply shorter and easier to tackle for adults who are less confident in their reading skills. The books are then sold through major retailers, online booksellers and are loaned from libraries.

Quick Reads is making real, lasting changes to people's lives. Since 2006 we have distributed over 4.5 million books, registered 3 million library loans and through the outreach work hundreds of thousands of new readers each year, often in some of the hardest to reach communities, are introduced to the joys and benefits of reading. Quick Reads is a unique collaboration and we are very grateful for the support of everyone involved.
